OpenEdition Journals is part of OpenEdition, a comprehensive digital publishing infrastructure whose objective is to promote research in the humanities and social sciences. OpenEdition has developed three other platforms: OpenEdition Books (monographs and edited volumes); Hypotheses (research blogs); and Calenda (a calendar of academic events). OpenEdition Center is a public and non-profit initiative supported by prestigious research organisations. Its overall aim is to promote open access digital publishing.

Required additional documentation

☐ OpenEdition General Conditions of Use, completed, dated and signed,

☐ The membership list of the journal's editorial or academic committees,

☐ A description of how this/these committee(s) operate. How are they consulted, and for what purposes?

☐ A presentation of text selection procedures,

☐ A presentation standards required to authors,

☐ Three copies of the last 3 print issues – i.e. 9 copies in all. If texts of issues are online, it is not necessary to print them.

☐ Any other information that may help define the project.

Procedure

The access form and OpenEdition's General User Conditions should be filled in and signed by the Publishers. The Publishers should send both a paper version and an electronic version of the completed request form, and a dated and signed copy of OpenEdition's General Conditions of Use, to OpenEdition.

Please find below the evaluation stages :

1. Receipt of the complete application dossier and verification that the above-mentioned application criteria are met;
2. Presentation of the dossier to OpenEdition's academic board and designation of experts;
3. Internal assessment and double external expert assessment of the application;
4. Drafting of a summary of the application, including feedback from experts;
5. Ranking of applicant journals by the academic board on the basis of four criteria: scientific merit, editorial professionalism, operational feasibility (organisation and technical capacity of the editorial team), priority in terms of OpenEdition's key academic areas. This ranking is carried out each quarter and enables us to decide which titles can be accepted in view of OpenEdition's operational capacity.
6. The journal team is informed of the final decision.

Please note that most of the informations included in this form will be used in our journals catalogue and by our referencing system. Publishers will keep the right to oversee these public informations, for the publication of the detailed presentation of the journal on our catalogue for instance.

II Editorial and scientific policy

Presentation of the journal for the Academic Board of Openedition in the publisher's language (maximum 1500 characters):

The Romanian Journal for Baltic and Nordic Studies is the most important periodical dedicated to Baltic Sea area studies in South-Eastern Europe. It is the mouthpiece of the Romanian Association for Baltic and Nordic Studies and it was founded the same year as the association was established in 2009. The publication has been since its setting up an open access journal and continues to be dedicated to the ideal of bringing forth the results of research to instant public use. The areas it covers include, but are not restricted to, history of Baltic and Nordic Europe; geography of the area, Baltic and Nordic Europe in International Relations, Baltic and Nordic Europe societies and politics; Baltic and Nordic Cultures and Civilizations, economics of Baltic and Northern Europe; ethnic relations in Baltic and Northern Europe; relations between Romania and the Baltic and Nordic Europe; relations and links between the Black and Baltic sea areas. Each article is carefully scrutinized both from the perspective of its scientific merits (https://balticnordic.hypotheses.org/peerreview) and for checking it in order to prevent cases of plagiarism (https://balticnordic.hypotheses.org/ethics). Seventy-six academics from the United States of America to Baltic states and from Scandinavia to Greece have contributed to the journal in ten years of existence (https://balticnordic.hypotheses.org/journal-contributors). The journal is published biannually in English with abstracts in English and Romania.

Journal of Baltic Studies

Scandinavian Studies

Scandinavian Journal of History

Nordic and Baltic Journal of Information and Communications Technologies

The Romanian Journal of Baltic and Nordic Studies is unique at national level and represents the leading scientific magazine in South-Eastern Europe devoted to Baltic Sea and Scandinavian regions. While another journal, i.e. Nordic and Baltic Journal of Information and Communications Technologies, covers both regions in its pages, The Romanian Journal of Baltic and Nordic Studies is however the only journal approaching the two areas from the perspective of humanities, languages, economics, political sciences, international relations, geography and energy. In comparison to other respected journals in Baltic studies or Scandinavian researches, the journal is open-access and thus allows for an efficient transfer to readership worldwide.

Is the journal referenced in databases, such as Latindex, Historical Abstracts, Sociological Abstracts, Directory of Open Access Journals, etc.?

The Romanian Journal of Baltic and Nordic Studies has been a member of DOAJ and has applied for a new admittance after changing its website in December 2018. The answer to application is pending.

Does the journal have national or international classification with an academic body, such as the CNRS, HCERES, ERIH, CRSH, FQRSC, CAPES, ANVUR …. ?

What is the program of upcoming publications ?

The journal will come out from the printing in August 2019 (first issue) and December 2019 (second issue).

How do you see your publishing developing?
(Periodicity of journal, editorial perspectives, changes to the academic team, etc.)

The journal will continue to be published biannually until 2024 when it is planned to publish it quarterly. The average number of articles will be of 6 to 8 per issue. The academic team will be enlarged with new academics from Nordic and Baltic regions and researchers from France, Italy, United States and Japan already in 2019. The name of the publication may acknowledge a change in order to answer its growth, the new proposed title being The Journal for Baltic and Nordic Studies. However, a decision on this will be taken in June 2019 and the change will be implemented starting with 2020, if approved. A wider net of contributors will also be sought, which is actually a permanent preoccupation of the journal. The same applies to the quality of contributions, efforts are being invested unceasingly in order to attract ever better studies. The journal is also eager to increase the number of reviews, notes, discussions and interviews to at least half the number of scientific article for each issue, which will be achieved this year. By 2019 or 2020 an application will be submitted for inclusion in Elsevier databasis.

Team in charge of the layout and online editing process

OpenEdition's publishing model is based on the principle of autonomy. The idea is to give editorial teams the skills they need to add structured content to their journal. This involves training in how to upload texts using our digital publishing software Lodel. Free training sessions are provided to give new users practice in using Lodel: http://www.openedition.org/10837.
If a journal is accepted to join OpenEdition Journals, a member of OpenEdition's publishing team will help new users get to grips with styling texts.
Some journals choose to delegate the job of editing their texts to external providers. If you are interested in this option,please find a list of independent providers : http://maisondesrevues.org/882

Do you plan to ask for an external provider ? [ ] Yes [x] No

Has a copy-editor been appointed to prepare the texts for the online editing on OpenEdition Journals?
[x] Yes [ ] No
(The copy-editor's role is to prepare documents for online journal on the journal's website. He deals with editing service of OpenEdition)

People who will be involved in editing the texts online and who will be trained in how to use our Lodel software at user level (obligatory):
Training in Lodel should be undertaken by those people responsible for publishing the journal online.

APPENDICES

Application evaluation criteria by external expert

Please note that applications are evaluated on the basis of an expert's report. The expert will be asked the following questions. OpenEdition's academic committee will take its decision on the basis of the expert's report.

Academic scope

- What is the journal's target readership?
- Are contributors sought locally, regionally, nationally or internationally?
- Does the journal publish firsthand texts or syntheses of works already published?
- Is the editorial or academic committee of the journal recruited locally, regionally, nationally or internationally?
- Would you recommend this journal to your colleagues?
- Would you recommend this journal to your students?

Academic quality

- Do the works published have an academic input to make to the subject?
- Is the journal of even quality throughout?
- Do projected forthcoming issues have an academic relevance?

Editorial quality

- Are issue selection procedures clearly displayed?
- Will the journal appear regularly?
- Is there regular attention to layout and proofreading?
- Are article selection rules explicit and relevant?
